

Learn About Available Tax Savings on Software

“Purchase new construction-specific accounting software for your business and save BIG. Here’s how...”

- For the 2009 tax year, qualifying companies* can immediately expense up to $250,000 of property purchases (including software) that would otherwise be depreciated over 3,5,7 or 15 years.
- If you don’t qualify for the immediate expensing, an additional provision would allow qualifying companies* to expense the cost of acquired software with two separate deductions. The first deduction allows a 50% immediate write-off of what you placed and kept in service during 2009.
- The second provision allows you to write-off of the remaining 50% of the software cost over a 3 year period, thereby generating a deduction of nearly 67% in the first year.
- If the 50% “bonus depreciation” does not make sense for your business this year, the new tax law allows you to “monetize” any accumulated unused tax credits in lieu of the depreciation, capturing the tax savings in a different manner.
- Tax laws continue to constantly evolve, so these incredible savings may only be available for software purchased in 2009.
